Mass Meeting Under the Auspices of the Peace Commission.

The Recital Policy of the Government Freely Discussed.

Speeches By Hon. Isaac Bassett, Public Good, Hon. J. B. Doolittle, J. V. Farwell, Wm. Bross, and Others.

A mass-meeting of citizens was held at Farwell Hall, last evening, for the purpose of giving to visitors from Indiana and elsewhere an opportunity to express their views of, and to promote the future policy of the government. The announcement that a meeting of this character was called to promote and encourage, together with Chicago, the community may be supposed to have been influenced to the full extent of their zeal to secure the presence of a large audience. Such, however, was not the case. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity, and many were unable to gain admittance. The platform was occupied by Hon. Isaac Bassett, Public Good, Hon. J. B. Doolittle, J. V. Farwell, of the Indiana Commission, Wm. Bross, Hon. Arnold Harris, D. B. Fisher, and one or two other gentlemen, besides those who had been invited to act as vice-presidents. Mr. Farwell, the chairman of the meeting, had been appointed by the Peace Commission to preside over the meeting, but was prevented by illness from attending. Mr. Public Good was therefore called to the chair, and, on taking his seat, announced the object of the meeting to be to express the views of the people of Chicago and Indiana in relation to the policy of the government toward the Indians, and to show what country belonged to the Indians, and what country belonged to the white people. He hoped that all would be heard who desired to speak, and that the meeting would be kept in order. He would now call upon Hon. Isaac Bassett to address the meeting.

Mr. Bassett said that he was glad to see so many present on this occasion, and was pleased to be informed by citizens that the meeting was not called by the friends of the Peace Commission, but that it was the result of the spontaneous action of the people. He was glad to see that the people had been aroused to the importance of the subject, and that they were willing to express their views. He was not a politician, and had never been a partisan. He had been a Democrat, but had never been a politician. He had been a Democrat, but had never been a politician. He had been a Democrat, but had never been a politician
